THE CHARGE AT CHICKAMAUGA.

One of the splendid battles of the war was that of Chattanooga. In The Century cen. Fullerton tells the story of the firing the signal guns to take the rifle pits as he base of the ridge occupied by Bragg, and the rush of 20,000 men. The general says: "The enemy were thrown into con-fusion and took precipitate flight up the ridge." He adds: "Many prisoners and a arge number of small arms were captured." And now follows a clear state-ment of what the soldiers did for themelves—a most instructive and brilliant ussage:

"The order of the commanding general had now been fully and most successfully carried out. But it did not go far enough to satisfy these brave men, who thought the time had come to finish the battle of Chickamauga. There was a halt of but a few minutes, to take breath and to reform the lines; then, with a sudden im-pulse, all started up the side of the ridge. Not a commanding officer had given the order to advance. The men who carried not a commanding omeer had given the order to advance. The men who carried the muskets had taken the matter into their own hands, had moved of their own accord. Officers, catching their spirit, first followed, then led. There was no therefore the transfer of the theory. thought of protecting flanks, though the enemy's line could be seen stretching berond on either side; there was no thought

"As soon as this movement was seen from Orchard Knob Grant quickly turned to Thomas, who stood by his side, and I heard him angrily say: 'Thomas, who or-dered those men up the ridge?' Thomas replied in his usual slow, quiet manner: 'I don't know; I did not.' Then, address. ing Gen. Gordon Granger, he said: 'Did you order them up, Granger!' 'No,' said Granger; 'they started up without orders. When those fellows get started all hell can't stop them.' Gen. Grant said some-thing to the effect that somebody would suffer if it did not turn out well, and then turning round, stoically watched ridge. He gave no further orders.

"As soon as Granger had replied to Thomas he turned to me, his chief of then to Sheridan and ask them if they or dered their men up the ridge, and tell them, if they can take it, to push ahead.' As I was mounting Granger added: 'It is hot over there, and you may not get through. I shall send Capt. Avery to Sheridan, and other officers after both of you.' As fast as my horse could carry me I rode first to Gen. Wood and delivered the message. 'I didn't order them up,' said Wood; 'they started up on their own account, and they are going up, too. Tell Granger, if we are supported, we will take and hold the ridge!' As soon as I reached Gen. Wood, Capt. Avery got to Gen. Sheridan and delivered his message. I didn't order them up, said Sheridan, but we are going to take the ridge. He then asked Avery for his flask and waved it at a group of Confederate officers standing just in front of Bragg's headquarters with the salutation, 'Here's at you.' At once two guns—the Lady Breckenridge and the Lady Buckner—in front of Bragg's headquarters were fired at Sheri-dan and the group of officers about him. One shell struck so near as to throw dirt over Sheridan and Avery. 'Ah,' said the general, 'that is ungenerous; I shall take those guns for that,' and he did, and a good many more."

"Did you ever pay any particular at-tention to the different characters who drop into the reading room of the library on Montague screet?" I was asked re-cently. "In the morning hours you will see a good many solid citizens, well along in life, come in and settle down in their favorite corners, after selecting a mag-azine or paper. They are life members and have come to look upon the library as a species of annex to their own homes. They finally hit upon an article which interests them, but if you keep an eye in their direction you will soon see them nodding. They will thus dream the morning away and imagine that they are keeping wall up to the time. keeping well up to the times in all that pertains to literature.

At a little after the noon hour young and middle aged ladies will begin to drop into the library. A few of the more seriously inclined will settle down to the cading of the magazines, but the younger ones glance over the illustrate periodicals, sibly look into a morning paper or two and finally drift away into the ladies' parlor where they take up a position near the windows. Between 3 and 4 o'clock a few gentlemen on their way home from business look into the reading room, glance hurriedly over the morning papers for some particular piece of news they have missed in their own journal, and after reading it bolt through the door. In the evening all these types do the reading room in a more rational fashion.—"Ram-bler" in Brooklyn Eagle.

Care of the Finger Nails.

Since the science of reading character by handwriting has come in it is said that by handwriting has come in it is said that the care taken of the finger nails affects the handwriting. The long, almond shaped nail is a great support to the mid-dle finger, which guides the pen. It is said that people with imagination are apt to have long, taper fingers and beautiful finger nails. They have a handwriting in which the long up strokes and down strokes cut into the lines above and be-reath them. The heads of their capital neath them. The heads of their capital letters are large. This handwriting shows order and impulse. When it has a marked downward movement this handwriting hows a tendency to melancholy.

An aptitude for criticism is shown among people who bite their nails. These people are cynical and severe, unchari-table and bitter; they write a small, cramped, illegible hand. The good natured critics are said to possess small, well shaped nails, and their handwriting is somewhat angular. Diplomacy has a long, supple hand and a beautifully kept finger nail. The handwriting of a diplo-matist looks like a snake crawling away. -New York World. New Product of the Grape.

A remarkable discovery comes to as from California. A chemist of Germany, whose researches have led him to the dis-covery of some generally nuknown propcovery of some generally maknown properties of the grape, has succeeded in extracting the water from its jnice, in vacuum, thereby producing a thickened substance, not unlike molasses in consistency, which will keep for many mouths, and which when needed for use can be thinned out with water. In that shape it is example the property of the property of the control out with water. In that shape it is exactly like French grape jnice, and then, exposed partly to the air, with or without the addition of sugar, will turn to wine. This process has just been placed before the world by Dr. Ferdinand Springmuchl, who is now on his way to California to test his theory on a large scale. This will undoubtedly make a great change in the trade of vineyardists, if the claims made are substantiated.—Commercial Enquirer.

Marrying with a Peck of Meal. In the year 1867 two persons left Dal-keith for Galashiels, and not having the requisite funds to get married by a minis-ter they each took a handful of meal and knelt down facing each other, after placknelt down facing each other, after piacing a basin between them. Both then placed their handfuls of meal in the basin and mixed it, in token that they "would not sever till death did them part." After swearing to this effect on a Bible they both rose up and declared themselves man and wife. They afterward returned to Dalkeith, where they resided as man and wife, the marriage being considered perfectly legal.—All the Year Round.
